

let's teach WHO

According to typical language development, children start asking questions using question words (e.g., what, WHO, where) around 2-3 years of age. Asking questions is how we get information about the world around us.

- WHO is that?
- WHO is picking me up?
- WHO is here?
- WHO has my things?

FIND IT:

Find the word on the device. WHO is a question word so it will typically be on the QUESTION page. If needed, use the Word Finder feature to learn where the word is located.

DEFINE IT:

The word WHO is a question word. We use it to find out about people.

USE IT:

Pay attention to when you already say the word throughout the day and touch the word WHO on the device whenever you say it. In addition to the ones above, here are a few more examples, "WHO is verbing? WHO likes candy? WHO wants a turn? WHO sees that? WHO wants to go? WHO

EXPERIENCE IT:

Read a book: almost any "hide/seek" or flap book

Sing a song: "WHO stole the cookie"

Have a question of the day: "WHO likes..."

Look through family pictures, and ask "WHO is that?"

EXPECT IT:

Create opportunities to practice saying the word.

Attendance Caller: Have him/her ask "WHO is here?"

Game Show Host: Play a game in class. Let him/her be the host, "WHO is behind door #1."

Book reader: Have him/her read book to sibling or class "WHO is that?" or "WHO is verbing?"
